

CORRELATION OF CLAIM
39 TO DOUGLAS ET AL.

A method of providing ^{ONE} of the group consisting of medical veterinary and other health care information on subjects of interest to a user, comprising:

*health care information (18 in FIG.1). User is 10
in FIG.1.*

accepting an inquiry from the user

col. 14, lines 38-52, user inquires on earned points in account.

determining a level of service based on the inquiry system determines that user wants to view points account, which is a first level of service.

if the level of service is a first level of service:

determining a user sophistication based on the inquiry accumulating points in the account which correlate to user participation, and thus user development (col. 14, lines 42-45, lines 53-55.)

searching a database at an initial level using the search request, in order to identify information requested in the user inquiry;

searching the points account.

conditioning the search results based on the user sophistication;

determining the points earned.

providing the conditioned search results to the user displaying the points account.